and unique fusion to improve human dimensions, and a capacity to develop intercultural and interdisciplinary skills. This program was originally co-created in partnership with the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill (UNC). The UNC/UA faculty team developed an experiential learning model that intersects theories and realities of borderlands where students had the opportunity to engage to analyze their own educational experience. The program includes activities and faculty lectures organized by various UA units and with community collaborators like the Consulate of Mexico in Tucson and Douglas. Students will also have the opportunity to attend lectures given by professors, researchers and community members from the Universidad de Sonora (UNISON) located in Sonora, Mexico.

Program Description: This signature program offers an elevated cultural borderland experience, a professional development opportunity, an innovative
