In this presentation, we will hear from Amanda Parkman, a disabled, Asian American, first-generation college graduate who enjoys traveling! As an avid solo traveler, she's made countless joyous memories and learned many lessons that she will share with the audience with the hopes that they inspire others to travel and brings awareness of the challenges disabled individuals encounter when they do.

Join this webinar to hear Amanda share tips, advice, and resources that have been valuable to her in her adventures while traveling with a physical disability.

AMANDA PARKMAN (SHE/HER)

Amanda is a disabled, Asian American first-generation college graduate. She completed both her Bachelor’s and Master’s degree at the University of Arizona. Currently she works in Leadership Programs within Student Engagement and Career Development at the University of Arizona. She enjoys traveling, reading, watching TV, listening to podcasts and believes all her hobbies are better with food.

Join Webinar @ GEL.ARIZONA.EDU